The County is updating the Sacramento County Code and Zoning Code in response to concerns about the spread of Highly Pathogenic Avian Influenza (HPAI), as well as addressing potential illegal activities and public nuisances related to the keeping of large numbers of crowing fowl, specifically, roosters. Before drafting new regulations, County staff seeks initial feedback from agricultural stakeholders and relevant educational organizations, including, but not limited to, the Agricultural Advisory Committee, Sacramento County Farm Bureau, University Cooperative Extension, 4-H, Future Farmers of America (FFA), and the local farming community. The primary goal of the proposed Crowing Fowl Ordinance is to protect commercial poultry operations, hobby farmers, and agricultural education programs (such as 4-H and FFA). The Ordinance aims to strike a balance between preserving agricultural rights in the County and addressing the negative impacts of illegal activities and poor animal management practices in both agricultural, rural residential and urban areas.
